

Name: _____

Date: _____

Simple Sentences

A sentence has a subject and a verb and expresses a complete thought. This is also called a simple sentence—one subject-verb combination that expresses a complete thought.

The subject can be compound, meaning more than one person doing something. The verb can also be compound, meaning the subject is doing more than one thing. These are still simple sentences.

Examples of Simple Sentences:

- Joseph read a book.
- Joseph and Mary read books. (Compound subject)
- Mary read a book and wrote a note. (Compound verb)

Read these simple sentences. Underline the subject(s) and write the verb(s) on the line.

1. Caroline rode her bike to my house. _____
2. Dan and Ethan played football yesterday. _____
3. Morgan ran and caught the ball. _____
4. Jack and Sam are my dogs. _____
5. The sun is very bright today. _____

Read these groups of words. Are they complete simple sentences? Write “yes” or “no” on the line provided.

6. Mr. Harris stood and wrote on the board. _____
7. The telephone ringing. _____
8. Because she was afraid. _____
9. That cake is delicious! _____
10. Are you afraid of the dark? _____

Name: _____

Date: _____

Answers Simple Sentences

A sentence has a subject and a verb and expresses a complete thought. This is also called a simple sentence—one subject-verb combination that expresses a complete thought.

The subject can be compound, meaning more than one person doing something. The verb can also be compound, meaning the subject is doing more than one thing. These are still simple sentences.

Examples of Simple Sentences:

- Joseph read a book.
- Joseph and Mary read books. (Compound subject)
- Mary read a book and wrote a note. (Compound verb)

Read these simple sentences. Underline the subject(s) and write the verb(s) on the line.

1. Caroline rode her bike to my house. ____rode_____
2. Dan and Ethan played football yesterday. _____played_____
3. Morgan ran and caught the ball. __ran, caught_____
4. Jack and Sam are my dogs. ____are_____
5. The sun is very bright today. _____is_____

Read these groups of words. Are they complete simple sentences? Write “yes” or “no” on the line provided.

6. Mr. Harris stood and wrote on the board. ____Yes_____
7. The telephone ringing. _____No_____
8. Because she was afraid. _____No_____
9. That cake is delicious! _____Yes_____
10. Are you afraid of the dark? _____Yes_____